The program will be presented by Les Aseere, of Johns Manville. Les is a senior engineer with Manville and is currently the technical lead and application engineer for the E3co solar project. He has worked in product development and application for Manville. Prior to JM, Les worked for 3M Advanced Development Labs. Les earned his engineering degree from San Diego State University. Les will introduce the concept of solar technologies, discuss and compare the applications of thin film and crystalline technologies, and address roof friendly installation methods. If time and weather permit, we will observe different installations in place on the roof.
